

Senior Staff Opportunities

Community Organizer Communications Officer

Closing date: May 25, 2010

The Alberta Federation of Labour, Alberta's largest policy advocacy organization for working people, is looking for skilled and committed people to fill two exciting senior staff positions.

The AFL represents more than 20 unions from across the province and is an equal opportunity employer. Women, people of colour, aboriginals, workers with disabilities, gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender workers are encouraged to apply for this position.

The opportunities currently available are in the areas of community organizing and communications. Candidates for both positions are required to perform at a professional level and to work as part of a team in developing and implementing various campaigns and projects. Core responsibilities include communication and public relations, research, organizing, education and training. Commitment to the goals and objectives of the trade union movement must be demonstrated.

A combination of experience and education equivalent to a Masters degree in social sciences or humanities and some experience in the social justice movement or trade unions is required. Both positions are members of the Communications Energy and Paperworkers Union (CEP) Local 445. Annual salary is $83,000 with full benefits pursuant to the collective agreement.
